GUM SHOE MEN OF WASHINGTON

Night Watchmen Who Render Good Service.

GUARDIANS OF PRIVATE PROPERTY

They Know the Queer Happening of the Capital When the Night Owls Are on the Wing.

They wear no uniforms of blue, nor brass buttons, and they don't take part in the annual parade of the District of Columbia Police Department, out their services are so valuable that but for them security at night would be a thing almost impossible. They are the night watchmen, the protectors of public and private property; in other words, in the language of the streets, the "gum shoe" men. These are the men who meet the criminal on his own ground, and the men who come out ahead in the little games of des perate chance played every night when sleeping Washington is tucked snugly in bed, with the counterpane pulled over its

No member of the night watchmen force has ever been a hero, or, at least, if he has, his heroism has never been exploited in the way such acts usually are When he does a deed that only a brave man could do he steps quietly back, and the man in blue gets the credit. This has been the case time after time.

Not on Official Pay Rolls. The night watchmen gets no pay from suance of badges, and, armed with these, a good gun and a blackjack, they traverse the streets at night, on the lookout for thieves and robbers of the highways. They are paid by the private parties emplaying them, and not very well paid at the great reward although undoubtedly an unsatisfactory one, is the consciousness of service well performed.

Clad in ordinary civilian clothes, and with feet shod in rubbers, "gum shoes," the men call them, the night watchman goes on duty late in the evening, and re-mains on until daylight. Most of them arrive at their beats at 10 o'clock, and are still there when the milkman, the advance guard of morning, reaches the city before dawn. They go off about 6 o'clock, and sleep during the day.

For them life is topsy-turvy.

Hobnobbing With the Cop.

While on duty the watchman hobnobs with the policeman, and the two become chums after long association. But the watchman must prove himself first, for the bluecoat has learned by experience that there are spies out, watching to see if he smokes on duty or goes up into an alley to sleep. The midnight work of both the police.

man and the night watchman is not all of lows a serious kind. There are many incidents, constantly occurring which are more humorous than the funniest situation in a comedy, and much is seen during the "wee sma' " hours of which the average, "wee sma" hours of which the average, well-regulated citizen knows nothing.
"It's pretty lonely, sometimes," said one of the 'gum shoe' men recently in the course of an early-morning conversation. He settled himself on a breadbox in the sheltered doorway of a grocery store, gnawed off a "chew" of tobacco, and became reminiscent.

"Well, to make a long story short, the man was just about to shoot himself. He had started out, to go down to the park, and after opening the door changed his mind and went into the parlor. I, of course, persuaded him that it was foolish commit suicide, and took him up to

Home to His Sleep.

The groceryman came to open his store, and the night watchman went home Down at Police Headquarters nebody knows just how many watchmen of this kind there are. The number of badges is-sued by the department is 550, but this number includes many issued to employes of the Treasury, State, War, and Navy, and other departments, the Congressional Library, and the various public buildings. These watchmen do not go out on the streets, and are employed, not by the District, but by the Federal Government. The District of Columbia merel: the necessary metal Shoomaker Co., 1331 E St.

MERGER CASE HEARING TODAY

Granted a Trial.

JURISDICTION TO BE DETERMINED

Arguments in the case of the Northern Sureties Company by attorneys representing the State of Minnesota and the com pany are being heard today in the United tates Supreme Court.

The question at issue today is a preliminary one, and does not touch the le-gality of the railroad merger. Minneota, through her attorney general, desires to file a suit in the Supreme Court, to bring about the disolving of the com-

Decision Next Monday.

Following all precedents the decision on this question will not be handed down before next Monday. The best information obtainable leads to the expectation that the court will decide in favor of the State of Minnesota.

It is pointed out that this case belong to the class specifically placed by the Constitution within the jurisdiction

To that extent the decision of Trial in October.

The trial of the case on its merits will probably be set for a hearing during the October term of the court, and it will undoubtedly be hotly contested.

The railroad companies will have son of the best lawyers of the country engaged, and Minnesota has already employed, besides her attorney general, two of the most eminent railroad lawyers in the Northwest to fight the case.

When the decision will be rendered on the important question as to the legality of the railroad combination is problematical. It may not be handed down until next

"Just a little while after that, in the same neighborhood, I was walking along about 3 o'clock in the morning, when I thought I noticed something suspicious about the front door of a house I had just passed. I went back, and sure enough, the door was wide open. I could see into the hall.

"I stepped inside, and, as I did so, I stumbled over something in the vestibule. It was a pair of shoes. That made me wonder more than ever, and I was about to light the gas in the hall, when I heard a noise in the front parlor. I rept to the door, pushed aside the portions of the providers, and looked in.

London Market Declines.

The London market for American stocks was again shown at material declines. and was generally heavy, with the exception of the Kaffir stocks, which rose sharply on the rumored capture of an im-portant leader of the Boer forces. For-sign houses sold moderately, principally eign houses sold moderately, principally the steel shares.

The market continued under moderate pressure throughout the morning, but toward midday there was a scattering covering of shorts in advance of the meeting of the Supreme Court at Washington, although it was recognized that a decision might not be announced for some time to come.

Copper Dealings Heavy.

The dealings were particularly heavy in copper, and the stock was strong on an advance in the selling price for the metal. Notwithstanding the talk of an early sue of bonds by the Erie Company, those stocks rallied toward midday with the re mainder of the list. The National Lead continued exceedingly strong on the court will be a victory for Minnesota. rumors of a closer consolidation in the trade.

Money Extremely Easy. Money was extremely easy, large mounts being loaned under 3 per cent. A few stocks were affected by rumors of particular significance, among them being the National Lead issues, which advanced on reports of the progress of ef-forts to concentrate the various concerns ngaged in the reduction of lead ores American Smelting was strong in sym-athy with the rise in lead. Sugar Refining was active, and, after opening higher, developed weakness.

The United States Steel issues were fairly active within narrow limits.

The Railway List Prince changes in the railway list were imited and irregular. Union Pacific was rather heavy and St. Paul opened mate rially lower, later on rallying somewhat. The Reading shares showed some disposition to recover from their sharp depression of Saturday. The Erie stocks were active around last week's closing prices.

Pennsylvania Falls Off. Fairly large dealings in Pennsylvania resulted in lower prices for that stock. The local traction stocks were generally steady, with fairly active dealings in Man-hattan and Metropolican Street Railway. Sales of stocks to I p. m., 295,100 shares; bonds, $1,821,000.
